

Dr. Max Manwaring

1. Need to Understand Asymmetry.
2. Need to redefine 'war,' 'power,' 'enemy,' and 'victory.'
3. Need to consider how to attack 'new' centers of gravity--and the need to defend one's own.
4. Need to understand that conflict has become multi-everything, and requires 'new' means of generating vertical and horizontal unity of effort.
5. Need to stress that contemporary conflict is not 'limited;' it is in fact total.

This is strategic reality. To argue that all this is too difficult to deal with/achieve is to deny the possibility of 'winning.'
